BONUS BILL CERTAIN TO PASS THE HOUSE TODAY

SPEAKER GILLETTE OVER-RULES ALL
OBJECTIONS RAISED TO THE METHODS
BY WHICH BILL IS CALLED ON FLOOR

Then The House, Despite Protests Of The Democratic Leaders, Overwhelmingly Votes
In Favor Of Special Rule Being Invoked.

VOTE ON SPECIAL RULE WAS 276 TO 126

Washington, D. C. March 23.—The $4,000,000,000 bonus bill was taken up for passage by the House today. The special rule enabling its backers to put it through without discussion was called up in the House shortly after it convened and the semblance of a fight was started. Chairman Campbell, of the Rules Committee presented the rule. At once Representative Garrett, Democratic leader, made the point of order that the rule was not privileged in that it was violating a provision of the House rules. The gag rule, Garrett said, was improper because it shut off a motion to recommit. Garrett and the Republicans wrangled over technical questions until Speaker Gillette finally overruled the point of order. This killed the move to insert a cash bonus.

Six Year Old Heiress To Armour Millions Dies;
Cause Is Peritonitis

Chicago, Ill., March 23.—Gwendolyn Armour, the six year old daughter of Philip D. Armour, died early today at the family mansion on Lake Shore drive. Ten doctors and a corps of nurses fought all night to save the life of the heiress to the Armour millions. All traffic was diverted from the street and every effort made to keep the neighborhood quiet. The girl died of peritonitis after an illness of several days. Her father, Philip D. Armour, is a grandson of the founder of the Armour business.

A. F. Of L. Official Says
Labor Will Drain Funds
To Help Miners' Strike

Washington, D. C. March 23.—Labor will drain its treasury and fight to the last ditch to protect and provide relief for the 600,000 coal miners scheduled to walk out on April 1st if that is found necessary. James Lord, head of the American Federation of Labor, mining department, predicted here today.

Union labor considers the present situation one of the most important industrial battles in its history. Lord charged that Wall Street is financing the strike and wants it. He declared that the uncompromising attitude of the operators reveals their decision to force a suspension of work and that the whole matter is an operators' conspiracy to raise coal prices and hoodwink the public.

DEMOCRATIC OFFICE
SEEKERS WILL MEET
TO DISCUSS PLANS

Harrisburg, Pa., March 23.—The Democratic candidates for statewide offices selected by the Committee of Seventy-two will meet here tomorrow to confer with Chairman Bruce Sterling concerning campaign plans. John A. McSparran, candidate for Governor, Colonel Frederick B. Kerr and Judge Samuel L. Shull, candidates for the United States Senate, Charles McAvoy, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Marshall Thompson, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, will be here to discuss campaign plans with a tentative platform.

Farrington, Of Illinois,
May Be Breaking Point
In Miners' Organization

Cleveland, Ohio, March 23.—A possible serious break in the ranks of the mine workers threatened to disrupt the organization. When the committee of 116 members was called to formulate plans for conducting the mine tie up the possibility of a split was seen by union leaders in the threat of Frank Farrington of Illinois. That he and his followers would insist on separate state wage negotiations with operators, which is strongly opposed by officers of the union.

BRING BACK THE BAREFOOT BOY
SAYS BURBANK

Great Naturalist Says
We Begin Education
Too Early And Boy
Doesn't Learn Nature.

KEEP HIM IN OPEN

By ROBERT A. DONALDSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
San Francisco, March 23.—(United Press)—The same care and treatment necessary to bring plant life to its greatest development, is necessary to child life, if the human race is to be brought to its highest development.

That is the opinion of Luther Burbank "plant wizard," who made his views known in an interview with the United Press.

"All Animal life is sensitive to environment, but of all living things the child is the most sensitive. In the course of my many years of investigation into the plant life of the world, creating new forms, this thought in relation to children has always been uppermost in my mind. 'Surroundings act upon a child as the outside world acts on the plate of a camera. Every possible influence will leave its impress upon the child, even overcoming heredity. 'A child literally absorbs environment. It is the most susceptible thing in the world to influence. The life of a child can be practically moulded by the influences with which it comes in contact.

"I make a plea for the revival of the barefoot boy—the boy who knows and loves nature. I must enter a most earnest protest against beginning education at the kindergarten age.

"No boy or girl should be permitted to see the inside of a school house until he is at least 10 years of age. I am speaking now of the boy or girl who has the privilege of being reared in the old place that is truly fit to bring up a boy or a plant—the country, the small town—the nearer nature the better.

"In the case of children born in the city and compelled to live there, the temptations are so great, the life so artificial, the atmosphere so like that of a hot-house, that such a child should be placed in school earlier as a matter of safeguard.

"Not only would I have a child reared for the first ten years of its life in the open, in close touch with nature—a barefoot boy with all the physical stamina that implies—but also I would have him reared in love. 'I believe that the wave of public dishonesty which seems to be sweeping over the country is chiefly due to the lack of proper training—breeding, if you please—in the formative years of life.

"Be honest with the child. Countenance dishonesty in word, look or deed, and you have started a grafter. Nor can you be dishonest with your child in thought. The child reads your motives as no other human being reads them.

"Keep the child out of doors. He will learn valuable lessons from nature, and nature's God. Shun early education in the academic sense as you would shun a plague.

"Pick out any trait which you may desire in a normal child, honesty, fairness, purity, loveableness, industry, thrift, what not; by surrounding the child with sunshine from the open sky and from your heart, giving it re-communion with nature, and well balanced nutritious food, and you can endow it for all its life with these traits.

"There may be a struggle at first, for heredity will make itself felt. As in the plant, there will be strong

FREE COURSES FOR EX-SERVICE MEN
OFFERED BY K. OF C.

Wonderful Opportunity
Is Presented Which All
Ex-Soldiers Should Investigate At Once.

LOCAL COMMITTEE

* * * * *
The local committee on the free courses outlined in this article is, Ed. T. Kelley, Esq., Francis Etzweiler and Hillary Shillen.

The Board of Directors of the Knights of Columbus, inspired by the splendid success of its evening schools offering free instruction to ex-service men, and impressed by the great benefits accruing to the students, decided some months ago still further to extend its program of vocational education by the institution of a system of correspondence or home study courses. These courses are designed to bring free instruction to certain subjects to those ex-service men who, by reason of remoteness, lack of funds or other causes, have been unable to take advantage of opportunities or instruction in evening classes.

It should be stated at the outset that our present plans contemplate the conduct of correspondence courses for ex-service men exclusively. Under no conditions will courses be issued to men or women who cannot submit conclusive proof of honorable discharge from service in the Army or Navy of the United States during the World War.

During the past two and one-half years since the institution in the Fall of 1919 of the Knights of Columbus system of evening schools, offering to the ex-service men in the larger cities throughout the country free instruction in academic, commercial and technical or trade courses, more than 150,000 ex-service students have been enrolled. This fact indicates that the ex-service man is disposed to take advantage of the free educational opportunities extended to him under Knights of Columbus auspices. Incidentally also, it betokens a general confidence in the practical nature of the courses that have been conducted, in the excellent quality of instruction, and in the spirit of generous service and of educational efficiency pervading the entire movement.

How to Apply

Any ex-service man or woman desiring to enroll in a course is requested to write to William J. McGinley, Supreme Secretary, Knights of Columbus, New Haven, Conn., for an application blank, and to return it properly filled out and sworn to as required. If the information that he submits satisfies the Educational Bureau that he is properly qualified to pursue the course for which he makes application, and if there is a sufficient number of registrants for the course, he will be enrolled and he will receive the first instruction material. If the applicant is not enrolled, he will receive notice to that effect, giving the reasons therefor.

In case of an overwhelming demand for enrollment in any particular course, it may be necessary to establish a waiting list. In this event applications will be cared for in the order of their receipt.

Denby Threatens Further Cut In Navy If Pending Bill Passes

Washington, D. C. March 23.—Secretary Denby and other high naval authorities have threatened to cut gross passes the bill reducing the navy to twelve battle ships, six naval enlisted personnel, to 65,000 less than the number allotted the men, it was learned today.

From $20 to 50 Cents an Hour

John McElroy received $20 for sitting as a director of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. The next day he resumed his labors as a yardman at 50 cents an hour.

LAST MINUTE RUSH AT STORES PREPARING FOR BIG EVENT

It's been a case of "Just Before the Battle, Mother" all over town today as far as the merchants are concerned. They have been preparing for the great event which will be ushered in when Old Sol comes over the hill in the morning—Spring Dollar Day.

Never before has Dollar Day been entered into with such a vim and vigor as it has been this Spring. Not only have what are termed merchants but other lines of business that have service for sale have entered this service in a Dollar Day spirit.

The big yellow cards began to appear in the stores yesterday afternoon and the new attractor, a big red hand, made folks stop and look. Then the windows began to take on a Dollar Day appearance until this afternoon hardly a store but what will have everything in readiness for opening to the crowds tomorrow morning.

There are a host of new advertisements in today's Progress and all thru the paper, including that favorite column, Items of Interest, you will find the greatest gathering of bargains that it has been the pleasure of Clearfield merchants to place before the public.

Now all that is asked is that the weatherman be in a good humor and that he send us as nice a day as we have had today. This will mean the greatest outpouring of buying folk that this city has ever seen.

U. S. Navy Joins In Enforcement Of Dry
Laws Of The Nation

Washington, D. C., March 23.—The Navy today joined Prohibition enforcement forces in an effort to build up an air-tight booze blockade around the United States, which will stop the smuggling of liquor. Rear Admiral Rodman, Hampton Roads, Virginia, Commandant of the Fifth Naval District, issued an order for the search of all vessels before docking at Hampton Roads. Rodman also said he would hold commanding officers of all battle ships, destroyers and the like responsible for liquor found on their ships. Similar orders will probably be issued by commanders in other districts.

PREDICTED FOUR POWER PACT WILL PASS 69 TO 27

Washington, D. C., March 23.—An eleventh hour poll of the Four Power Pacific Treaty vote shows it will be ratified tomorrow, with the Brandegee reservation attached, by a vote of at least 69 to 27. The poll also disclosed the fact that the danger of an upset due to the desire of some Republican Senators to eliminate the Brandegee reservation is past. It indicated that fewer than a dozen Republicans would vote to strike out the Brandegee proposal.

PROMPT ACTION OF FORMER RAILROADER
SAVES BAD SMASHUP

The prompt action of C. S. Strausbaugh averted the wreck of a New York Central coal train from Cherrytree which passing through the Third Ward one day the past week. Mr. Strausbaugh, who is a railroad man himself, while watching the train passing noted a brake rigging come loose and drop to the track as the head of the train was crossing Moose Creek bridge. A tie was torn out by the dangling mass of iron but before further damage was done Mr. Strausbaugh gave the engineer a "stop" signal. Engineer Theodore Peterson promptly clamped on his "air" and the train was stopped. Only this prompt action on the part of Mr. Strausbaugh saved a wreck of the train and the train crew composed of Engineer Peterson, Fireman Freeman Smith, Conductor Bruce Smeal were profuse in their thanks to the young man for his good work.

LEGION BAND WILL GIVE A CONCERT
SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The American Legion Band will give another of its excellent concerts at the High School Auditorium Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. An especially pleasing program has been prepared for the occasion and music lovers who attend are promised a rare treat.

Admission will be free and everybody is invited to attend.

Bell for Senate

John A. Bell, 57, Pittsburgh multi-millionaire, is being primed for the appointment as U. S. Senator from Pennsylvania in event Senator Cron resigns.

rel M. Jones, Secretary of the Association sent out notices on Tuesday for the meeting which President A. Wright Bigler says will be an important one.

John Duval Dodge, youthful Detroit millionaire, is an optimist. Although he served five days in jail for speeding, he isn't worrying about new charges he faces.

Women's Emergency Committee, Near East Relief

1. Mrs. Philip North Moore. 2. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, chairman. 3. Mrs. Thomas G. Winter. 4. Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip. 5. Mrs. Josephus Daniels. 6. Mrs. George Maynard Minor.

These six women and over fifty others equally well-known nationally are making an emergency appeal to the women of the land to defeat the threat of death that hangs over the children of the Near East.

WOMEN MEET CRISIS IN NEAR EAST RELIEF

Sponsor Lives of 25,000 Children to Keep Them From Starving.

Twelve million women in America are rallying to the cry of the starving children cared for by Near East Relief in Constantinople and Asia Minor. Lack of funds has forced the organization to make a 25 per cent cut in its orphanage appropriations during the spring months, when relief work is most seriously needed than at any other time during the year.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt has formed a Women's Emergency Committee of representative women from every corner of the land. The committee represents 12,000,000 American women, and they appeal to the motherhood of America to save the 25,000 children now under sentence of death because of the cut by Near East Relief. It must be a super-gift, the women say, and must be added over and above to whatever gifts their communities may have made during the year to the work of Near East Relief.

Mrs. Vanderlip a Witness
Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, recently returned from the Near East, says: "Galewally said that one of the striking American qualities is a deep adoration for all children. Not just one's own, but for every child anyone of us meets anywhere. When I saw the pale, thin faces, dumb, hopeless eyes and the emaciated bodies under the scanty clothes of the refugee children in the Near East I longed to bring home to the child-loving people here a poignant appeal for help to save their lives and restore childhood peace to their hearts. The respect which knowing these people gives one, bases my desire to save these children, on a serious recognition of the terrible loss the world will sustain if this fine population perishes."

Near East Relief officers estimate that if the women of the United States will keep 25,000 children alive it will be possible to meet the needs of the other 75,000 under American care and protection in the Near East.

Among the women who compose the Women's Emergency Committee that will make every effort to "finish the job" are:

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, chairman; Mrs. Philip North Moore, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, Mrs. George Maynard Minor, Mrs. Josephus Daniels, Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, Miss Bina West, Miss Anna A. Gordon, Mrs. Lena Lake Forrest, Mrs. Elsie Lines Chapin, Mrs. Agnes H. Parker, Mrs. Percy V. Pennington, Mrs. Mary Roberts Reinhardt, Miss Jane Addams, Professor Vida Scudder, Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, Mrs. Millbank Johnson, Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, Miss Mary Emma Woolley, Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, Doctor Esther Lovelace, Mrs. William Atherton Dupuy, Mrs. Eugene J. Grant, Mrs. Milton P. Higgins, Miss Charles Ormond Williams, Mrs. Frederick Abbott, Mrs. Charles E. Wolbert, Mrs. James W. Renick, Mrs. Florence Spencer Duryea, Mrs. Frank J. Butler, Mrs. Robert J. Reed, Mrs. Coleman da Pout, Mrs. Robert E. Speer, Mrs. Medill McCormick, Mrs. Lizzie George Henderson, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge, Mrs. William Fraser McDowell, Mrs. Mary LaRocca, Mrs. Clarence F. R. Jenne, Mrs. John S. Drum, Miss Rose Brenner, Miss Elizabeth Marbury, Miss Mary Mullett, Mrs. Edwin M. Bulkeley, Mrs. Harold A. Hatch, Miss Agnes Pepton, Mrs. John H. Finley, Miss Julia Lathrop, Miss Lillian Wald, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Mrs. Webster Fox, Jr., Miss Jane J. Martin, Mrs. Minnie Madden Fiske, Mrs. H. L. Robbins, Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Mrs. William M. Cogdon, Mrs. Walter W. Slack, Mrs. Joseph Irwin France.

ARCHBISHOP HAYES EN- DORSES NEAR EAST RELIEF

Archbishop Hayes.

His Grace, Archbishop Hayes, recently sent the following letter to Near East Relief: "I enclose check for five thousand ($5,000) from the Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York for the appealing Christian work of your committee. 'I am shocked to learn how terrifying are the present conditions in the Near East, especially in Armenia. A step must be put by the Christian world to this reign of massacre, famine, disease and horrors of every description. All must help. 'I commend most earnestly the appeal of the Near East Relief to the charitably thinking and mercifully disposed people of New York and in particular to the Catholic portion of the community."

"Very sincerely yours, (Signed) "PATRICK J. HAYES,
"Archbishop of New York."
National headquarters of the Near East Relief are located at 151 Fifth Avenue, New York.

HEAD OF NEAR EAST RELIEF MAKES APPEAL

that organization cutting down the appropriations for relief twenty-five per cent.

"At the lowest possible administrative cost," says Mr. Vickrey, "the Near East Relief has been caring for one hundred thousand children, the homeless little orphans of the Near East. The cut in appropriations, made necessary by the decreased contributions, means that twenty-five thousand equally helpless children now on our doorstep must be refused admission and turned into the streets to perish of cold and hunger. There can be no other fate than that awaiting them. We are their only help and support."

"Five dollars a month will compare the sentence for one child. And I do not believe there is a man or woman in a home in America who could not and would not give that much to save a little child."

MAGNIFICENT CO-OPERATION OF EPISCOPAL COMMUNION

A plan of co-operation in the work administered by Near East Relief has been inaugurated by Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, Presiding Bishop, and council of the Protestant Episcopal Church. An Auxiliary Committee consisting of eminent clergymen, including bishops, clergy and laymen, is being formed. This committee will be nationwide in its personnel and will have a local executive committee with a prominent layman as chairman. An especial emergency appeal is going forth to all parishes of the Episcopal Church for a Lenten contribution. Ten thousand orphan children, for whom no other provision is possible today, are made the special charge of the Episcopal Church. Bishop Gailor has given his personal endorsement to the Lenten appeal of the Near East Relief.

Had Almost Too Much Learning.
The cultured calculators have been extremely rare. The extraordinary Banister may, perhaps, be cited, born in 1731, who, at the age of twelve, had all the mathematicians guessing. He could read at three; at four he could speak Latin, French and German; at seven he knew Greek and Hebrew; at eleven he had written a dictionary of the last two tongues; at thirteen he was sending contributions to the various learned societies, etc. Finally, at nineteen, on Sept. 5, 1740, having learned apparently all there was to know, he died. That's what much learning leads to.

Real Measure of Worth.
The whole world does not revolve around any man—only a small portion of it. When a man undertakes to make himself the center of a larger portion, he must show himself worthy. Worth today is measured by service to fellow men, not by dollars.

DOGS AND TOGS GROW DAILY ROUGHER AND ROUGHER

Wire-Haired Breeds And Snappy Tweeds Are A Splendid Combination For The Out-Door Girl

Whether you are buying a new dog or a new street suit, the one thing you simply must remember is "The rougher, the smarter."

Time was, and not so many years ago at that, when dogs and fabrics were smooth. For handsome gowns and wraps, women wore rich broad cloth and allied fabrics; for street and traveling suits, nothing more informal than serge or chevrot.

And in those days smooth haired pug dogs, silky spaniels, dainty little Gricons were the acceptable favorites of the canine world.

But the rough dogs and the rough togs have been creeping on us gradually for several years.

All over America today rough breeds and rough tweeds are in the forefront of fashion.

For the business woman, the sportswoman or the shopper, as well, as Miss Fifth Avenue, out giving her wire-haired terrier its constitutional, already one perceives that nothing will be more popular for the Spring of 1922 than the three piece suit, which in most of its versions consists of but two pieces.

Sometimes the three piece suit is really made of skirt, blouse and cape, but most frequently it consists of a simple one piece dress with matching cape. Often the dress is sleeveless of the genus once called "jumper" with which any sort of sport silk or lingerie blouse may be worn.

While tweeds are in the lime-light, heather mixtures, wool jersey and the newer kasha, a delight ful fabric, with a very close, wooly weave, are ideal for the three piece suit.

Early Disillusionment.
When I was eight years old I was very much in love with a neighbor's boy, three years my senior—or imagined I was. One day, my dad bought me a pair of shiny new shoes, of which I was very proud. When my young knight came over to see my brothers I showed him my new shoes. He looked them over, then said to my brother, "Are they yours? They are big enough for an elephant." Thus ended my first love affair.—Exchange.

Long Suffering.
Scientists say that this old world of ours hasn't varied more than a second or two since recorded to making its annual trip around the sun. Considering the trouble and turmoil it has carried along, the record is remarkable.

Business First, as It Were.
The world is so full of folks that you have got to dig to excel. There's not much hope for the chap that wants to rest on every other corner. There's too much to do to take the rest cure before you really need it. It's a habit that puts petticoats where pants ought to be. If you're ever going to get up in the world you'll have to reach the top by "keeping on going."—Grit.

The Wool Combers.
In the Latin quarter of Paris one often sees groups of bareheaded women, sitting in some quiet corner of the street, perhaps within a church door, picking and combing the wool of their mattresses. No matter how poor a French peasant may be, he almost always possesses a comfortable bed with a wool mattress.

Normandy Seaweed.
The Normandy farms near the coast are rich and fertile. They are well tilled and fed with the seaweed that is cast up on the shore. Great carts, drawn by sturdy Normandy horses, pass and repass with their loads of seaweed, which makes a splendid dressing for the farms.

However, Most Men Do.
When a girl pins a flower on a man's coat she always tilts her chin up and looks at it sideways—and the man who doesn't take a tumble is too slow to lead a funeral procession.

What Blue Flame Means.
A steady blue flame indicates perfect combustion of gas, full heat and no waste, says the editor of Gas Logic (New York). It shows that the proportion of air and gas fed to the burners is such that every bit of heat in the gas is being developed. A yellow flame indicates that a part of the gas is not being consumed and is therefore being wasted.

Advice.
Think twice before you speak, my son, and it won't do any harm to keep on thinking while you speak.

The Methodist Episcopal Church loses one of its ablest and most logical speakers by the death of Rev. W. W. Hartman, and while it was known that he was to be removed from the Trinity pastorate, it was indeed a shock, not alone to his flock but to the people of the community, that his leaving would be so tragic.

The Republican party in Pennsylvania offers an enigma to the political puzzle solver. For once, the great minds and directors of the Republican party, who heretofore were able to sit down and put their stamp of approval on a slate of candidates, are unable to do so. The Democratic party, taking advantage of this situation in the ranks of their chief opponent, by their committee of seventy-two, seek to emulate the practices of the old guard group of Republicans, and if their plans materialize, we may see a Democratic machine that will be to the Republican machine what a flivver is to a Cadillac. All signs point to the possibility of the great mass of Republicans in Pennsylvania having an opportunity, for once, to get just what was expected under the uniform primary law; an opportunity to select their own candidates, and should the political situation remain unchanged, The Progress has such faith in the judgment of electorate that it has no fears about the calibre of man who will be selected to head the ticket. An organization, the remains of the once dominant candidate-making machinery may, at the last moment, throw its support to one of the present candidates, but is just as likely to throw its strength to one now unheard of and unsung about. This man would perhaps be Attorney General Alter, one of the outstanding figures in the state today and a leader who would command great strength. In either event there will be more than two men enter the primary and the individual voter will put the final stamp of approval on one of them and real democracy will triumph.

There is a real challenge to every honest man in the difficulties that confront us now. We are sluggish because we have stood around waiting for better times nearly all of 1921. We have never quite grasped the truth that "better times" are achieved only through persistent and hard work.

Good times can only come through the united efforts of a great many, who all strive in one direction—to secure greater production at less cost.

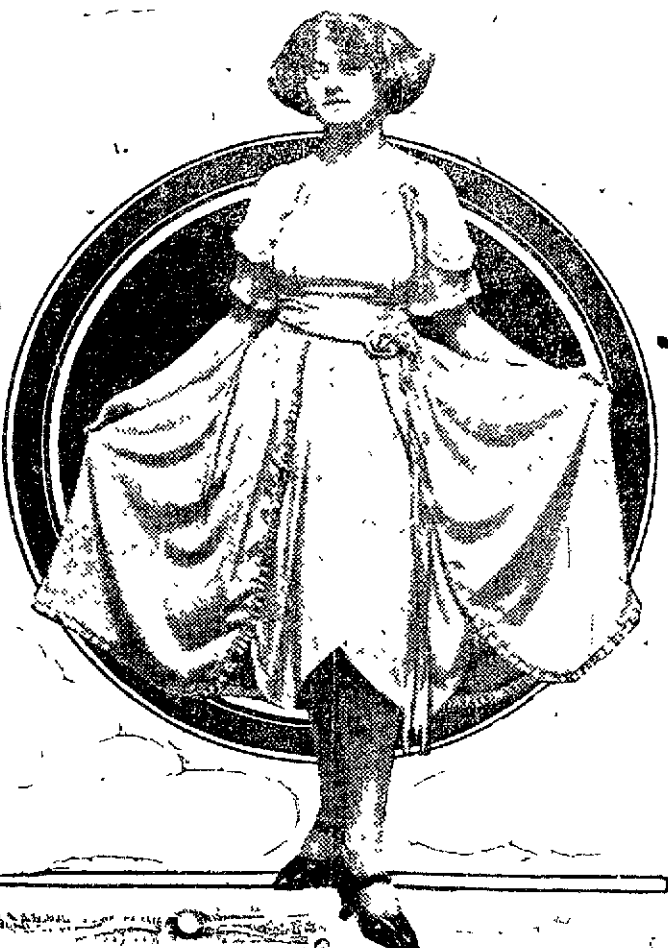

Let us meet the challenge boldly and with confidence; we can and will create for ourselves "better times," if we honestly strive for that goal. We can't succeed unless we are optimistic, energetic and relentless in our efforts to achieve.

It is like a game; if the players find it easy to win then they become careless, and suddenly they find themselves being beaten. Then when being defeated becomes a regular thing they lose heart, and their own mental attitude defeats them, until finally several of the players become determined that victory must be won. Then they apply themselves; they obey the trainer's rules and they practice, until no obstacle is too great, no opponent can hold them back, and victory is the natural result.

Let us meet the problems of 1922 in that manner.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

B. C. Forbes, the financial expert of the New York American, tells a whole barrel of truth in the following which is well worth perusal:

To lose one's savings through unfortunate stock market ventures has a tendency to make one feel bitter not only against the whole financial scheme of things but against the world and mankind in general. It makes one sour. It makes one feel that the world is full of dishonest people and run on dishonest lines. The total effect upon the loser's soul is likely to be even more serious than the effect upon his or her pocketbook.

Of course, no human agency, no laws, no regulations can safeguard foolish and greedy people against their own foolishness and their own greed. And the truth is that the great bulk of the losses sustained by dabblers in tenth-rate stocks arise from these two causes—foolishness and greed. The motive which inspires a great many persons of small means to take "flyers" in stock speculation is that would-be one—a desire to reap without sowing, to get a big return for little or no effort, to become rich in a hurry.

Elizabeth Hudson Jackson, mother of our great fighting Democrat, in her last interview with Andrew Jackson, in 1781, when he was thirteen and she was about to go to Charleston to minister to the sufferings of the American prisoners, confined on board the British hulks in Charleston harbor, a work of mercy in which she lost her life, admonished the to be famous "Old Hickory" to observe the following rules of life:

In this world you will have to make friends. You can make friends by being honest, and you can keep them by being steadfast. You must keep in mind that friends worth having will in the long run expect as much from you as they give to you.

To forget an obligation or be ungrateful for a kindness, is a base crime. Men, guilty of it sooner or later must pay the penalty.

In personal conduct be always polite, but never obsequious. No one will respect you more than you esteem yourself.

Avoid quarrels as long as you can without yielding to imposition. But sustain your manhood always.

Never brook wanton outrage upon your own feelings. If ever you have to vindicate your feelings or defend your honor, do it calmly. If angry at first, wait until your wrath cools ere you proceed.

Great Britain and other friends overseas are planning to arrange a comprehensive scheme with the consent of Parliament the Deputies and the others, to cancel the interrelated debt, of which the United States holds approximately $10,000,000,000 by far the major part. This country is to be consulted after the scheme is all worked out. Bankers smiled significantly when the cable dispatch of yesterday were shown to them. Aside from those in the small—very small—minority which has advocated the theory of debt cancellation, none would comment on the proposal.

Claus A. Spreckles, head of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, recently back from Europe, sizes up the sugar situation with cheerfulness.

words for the American housewife. "In January, raw sugar was down to 1 3-4 cents," said Mr. Spreckles, "and the Department of Commerce and Mr. Hoover advised that the surplus stock was cleared up. The bullish statement caused a rush of buying on the future, so that the country has, up to date, distributed to consumers almost double the amount consumed in the same period of 1921. Look at the recent advance as a 'flash in the pan.' A reaction is inevitable. Europe will be self-supporting in a few months and the demand for export will cease."

American tourists are expected to spend $250,000,000 in the United Kingdom, France and Belgium the coming season now about to open. The World War is still costing us money.

"Overeating, overdressing, too much entertainment and jazz is demoralizing the American people now," the reformers say. There is always some darn thing the matter with us nowadays.

PUNXSUTAWNEY GIRL DIES BY OWN HAND

Miss Christine States, a Punxsutawney young woman, with many acquaintances in this section, died at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Winslow, in Punxsutawney on Monday evening last as the result of mercurial poison taken with suicidal intent while despondent. The young woman, who was a popular member of Punxsutawney's younger set, was sixteen days previously. She repented of her rash action immediately after taking the poison, but despite all that medical skill could do, death ensued after more than two weeks of suffering. The deceased was 23 years of age.

MARRIED AT WEST SIDE PARSONAGE

Norman Witherite, of Jersey Shore, and Miss Lillian Zumstein, of Lawrence township, were married by Rev. C. C. Shively at the West Side Methodist parsonage at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the presence of a few friends.

Time Limit Set.

We'll back a jar of Vicks against the worst cold in CLEARFIELD

Every family here is invited to try the DIRECT treatment for all cold troubles

ABSORBED, like a liniment, and, at the same time, INHALED, as a vapor, Vicks reaches immediately the congested, inflamed air passages.

LITERALLY millions of families who have tried Vicks are now continual users of our product.

"So, naturally, we want you to make the test. Here is our offer—Buy a 35c jar from your druggist—use all or part of it—if you are not delighted with the results, mail us the top of the carton and the purchase price will be cheerfully refunded.

Made for years past

We make this offer and have made it for years because Vicks really helps the majority of cold troubles.

Vicks doesn't relieve every case, of course. No remedy can do that.

But if it fails in your case your money will be returned without question and remember YOU ARE THE SOLE JUDGE.

A druggist's discovery

A number of years ago a North Carolina druggist, searching for a better way to treat colds, hit upon a wonderful formula. He combined in the form of a salve the best of Nature's remedies for colds—Camphor, Menthol, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine, with other valuable ingredients.

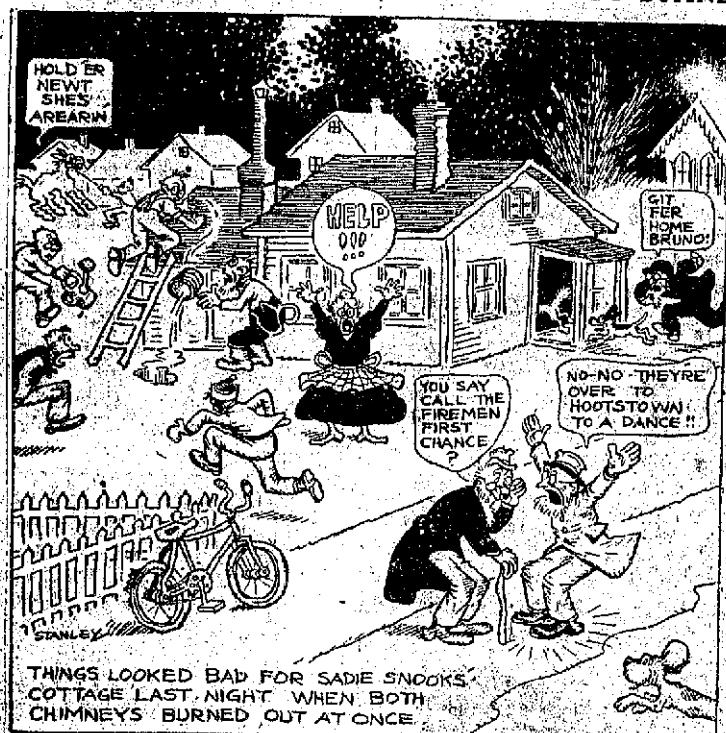

When this salve is applied over the throat and chest it not only penetrates and stimulates like a liniment, but the ingredients are released as vapors by the body heat. Thus the medication is carried with each breath thru the nose and throat to the lungs.

Now used from coast to coast

This remedy, Vicks' Vaporub, won instant local favor and its fame has spread, county by county, state by state, until now Vicks is a family standby from coast to coast.

LUTHERSBURG AND SANDY YOUTHS ARE TAKING UP CALF AND PIG CLUB WORK

Brandon Wright, of the boys and girls club work extension department of State College and County Agent Sterrett held two very interesting meetings Tuesday, one at the Sandy Township High School building and the other in the Grange Hall at Luthersburg. There were about seventy-five boys and girls in attendance at the Sandy Township meeting. The Dairy Calf Club, Pig and Poultry Club projects, were discussed with very good prospects for a Poultry club consisting of fifteen or twenty members which will be formed in the near future. During the first meeting there were more younger children who could not make a decision as to whether they would be able to join the clubs until they had talked it over with their parents. So nothing very definite could be done. But at the second meeting held at Luthersburg about one hundred and fifty persons were present among which were teachers, boys and girls as well as their parents, so considerable more work could be accomplished, and definite plans made. Discussion of the club work in every phase was capably handled by Professor Wright, after which leaders were selected for each different club and are as follows: Poultry club headed by L. B. Leis; Pig Feeding Club headed by Milt Leis; Pig Breeding Club, headed by J. Homer Reams; Junior Calf Club led by E. H. Harmon, with Professor Scheib as general supervisor of the clubs for the community work. With the exception of the Calf Club a membership of from six to eight boys and girls were signed up in each club. These clubs are still open for persons desiring to join. Only requirements are they must be between the ages of eight years and twenty years.

Luthersburg citizens are heartily endorsing work of this kind and a lively interest is being shown and a strong desire to have work of this kind to be carried on. An exciting "Round Up" will occur in the fall of this year under the personal supervision of either Brandon Wright or someone from the Extension Department of State College to over see and conduct this work. Mr. Wright is a specialist in this kind of work and the community should consider itself very fortunate in having a man of his caliber to aid organize and carry on work of this branch. County Agent Sterrett should have his share of the credit for being the instigator of bringing Mr. Wright here. Local banks are offering attractive rewards for the best records and work done along this line so it behooves these club members to get busy. Prof. Zech of Sandy township will act as local leader for its clubs.

The Reliable

11 North Third Street, Clearfield, Pa.

Go to bed and leave the bed-clothes loose about the neck so that the medicated vapors will be inhaled all night long.

This treatment will often furnish a cold over night, and so avoid the possibility of grip or pneumonia.

How Vicks should be used

For Spasmodic Croup, Children's Colds—Rub Vicks over the throat and chest until the difficult breathing is relieved, then spread on thickly and cover with a hot flannel cloth. One application at bed time usually prevents a night attack of croup.

For Head Colds, Asthma, Catarrh, Hay Fever—Vicks should be melted in a spoon and the vapors inhaled, or a little can be applied up the nostrils and sniffed up the head.

For Deep Chest Colds, Sore Throat, Tonsillitis, Bronchitis, Coughs—Vicks should be applied over the throat and chest, to open the pores of the skin, then rubbed in well until the skin is red, spread on thickly and covered with one or two thicknesses of hot flannel cloths. If the cough is annoying, swallow small pieces the size of a pea.

VAPORS IMPORTANT—Remember that half the effect of Vicks is in the inhalation of its vapors. So, when applied over throat and chest leave bed-clothes and night clothing loose at the neck so that these vapors can be freely inhaled.

Human Life Too Short.
By all the rules which nature observes among humbler mammals, 100 years ought to be a very ordinary age for a human being. Where is the mammal which, unless its life is cut short by accident or disease, fails to live to an age five times as great as the time it took to reach maturity? A fairly careful survey of the field answers "Nowhere." Indeed, the ratio of total life to maturity is more likely to be six, seven or eight, than five. But man, whose maturity cannot be placed at less than 20 or 22, thinks he is doing well when he passes three-score and ten, and only one out of many thousands reaches the age of one hundred.

Pays to Keep on Going.
Life's like a race. To win you must keep on going. The fellow who looks around to see what the grandstand thinks, is going to slow up enough to give him a chance to see others go by. It's the fellow that inspires cuss words. While the race is often to the swift it's just as often to the fellow who just keeps on going. He's bound to win who isn't affected by the changes of the weather or regulated by the smiles of friends. You've a work to do, keep going.

Knickers for Youth

There is no other garment made, which when worn with smart accessories, is so delightfully youthful as knickers. And it is a fact of simple psychology that when a woman knows she looks smart she automatically feels clever. Thus knickers should go big.

No Adulteration Possible There.

There are many odd and interesting sights to be seen in Paris. Some of them would surprise the American boy or girl. In the older sections of the city the milkmen go from door to door, pushing their "Pain Pines" (a bunch of reeds tied together) and followed by his truck of goats, ready to be milked. It is done before the door of each of his regular customers, who are sure of getting fresh milk.

Safety First.

Wishing for sleep is a poor way to get it

A LITTLE wisdom in the daytime is a better assurance of rest than any amount of anxious wishing when nerves are a-jangle at night.

What you do at noon often has more influence on sleep than what you want and hope for, at midnight.

Coffee's drug element, caffeine, whips up the nerves, and when its use is continued there's usually a penalty which no amount of mental effort can avoid.

The part of wisdom, as so many thousands have found, is to turn away from nerve-stimulation and adopt rich, delicious Postum as the mealtime drink. Postum delights the taste, but brings no disturbance to nerves or digestion. Even the little children can share in the enjoyment of Postum at any meal.

It's better to anticipate warnings than to be driven by them.

It's better to encourage and preserve sound nerves and complete health than to listen to the clock ticks at night and say, "I wish!"

You can get Postum wherever good food or drink is sold and served. An order today may be the beginning, for you, of the great satisfaction and comfort which so many others have found in Postum.

Your grocer has both forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

Wishing for sleep is a poor way to get it

A LITTLE wisdom in the daytime is a better assurance of rest than any amount of anxious wishing when nerves are a-jangle at night.

What you do at noon often has more influence on sleep than what you want and hope for, at midnight.

Coffee's drug element, caffeine, whips up the nerves, and when its use is continued there's usually a penalty which no amount of mental effort can avoid.

The part of wisdom, as so many thousands have found, is to turn away from nerve-stimulation and adopt rich, delicious Postum as the mealtime drink. Postum delights the taste, but brings no disturbance to nerves or digestion. Even the little children can share in the enjoyment of Postum at any meal.

It's better to anticipate warnings than to be driven by them.

It's better to encourage and preserve sound nerves and complete health than to listen to the clock ticks at night and say, "I wish!"

You can get Postum wherever good food or drink is sold and served. An order today may be the beginning, for you, of the great satisfaction and comfort which so many others have found in Postum.

Your grocer has both forms: Instant Postum (in cans) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) of luscious bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

CLEAN CUFFS WITHOUT SCRUBBING

When grimy cuff edges are scrubbed, something is bound to wear—and it isn't the wash board.

That's why we wash cuffs without scrubbing. Simple soap and water, combined with our modern washing process, cleanse them without a sign of wear.

Shirts washed this way wear longer, look better and feel better, too, when professionally laundered.

HOLLYWOOD TRIANGLE

Seena Owen, left, screen star, has filed suit in Los Angeles for divorce from George Walsh, film star and athlete. She names Estelle Taylor as co-respondent. The latter has just been selected to play the part of vampire in the new screen version of "A Fool There Was."

ONLY A MIRAGE!

Reactions of Turtles to Color.

Marine turtles lay their eggs on dry land, and as soon as the youngsters are hatched they make straight for the sea. Carnegie Institute men in the Dry Tortugas sought to find the influence that guided them to the water. When a sheet of red or yellow paper was placed between the baby turtle and the sea, it would turn and go in another direction; but a blue sheet drew him toward it no matter where it was placed. It would seem, then, to be color, rather than instinct or smell, that attracts the youngsters to the water.

Broadcloth.

A mixture of one ounce of fine pipe clay, twelve drops of alcohol and turpentine each is an excellent medium for removing stains from broadcloth. In cleaning, moisten only a small part of the material at a time, rub on the spot, let it remain until dry and then rub it off with a woolen cloth.

Good Advice.

Melba Couldn't Do It.

The latest Melba yarn has it that the song-bird turned up unexpectedly at a charity cafe-chantant, and the hon. organizer in doing the amiable nearly fell over herself. "Everyone wants to hear you sing badly," she burbled. "Then they won't," said the dame, "because I can't."

Not Flattering.

I am unused to children and besides knowing no lullaby songs I have no voice to carry a tune. I offered to care for a neighbor's child one afternoon. The child grew tired and asked me to rock her and sing. I began bravely but she stopped me and said: "You don't need to sing, I dess. Your songs make me wider awake."—Exchange.

Fast After a Week-End.

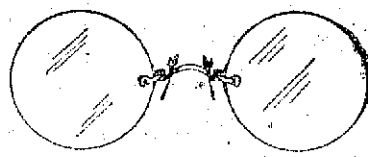

The wider freedom of the leisure hours of the week-end produces in the case of many ordinarily sedentary persons a condition of well-being and increased appetite which is apt to last on into the beginning of the working week, with disastrous consequences. Thus the Lancet (London) is advising persons returning to town from week-ends in the country to cut out their midday meal on Monday.

WHAT IF YOUR HOME SHOULD BURN?

Could you replace it for the amount of fire insurance you carry. You could NOT in these days of increased building costs. Then it behooves you to look into the matter carefully and I'd like to have the privilege of going over the matter with you.

I represent two fire insurance companies that are the soul of integrity and whose policies, while they conform to the rules laid down by the insurance commission may have some things that other policies do not have.

May I have the pleasure of explaining these points.

PARTY FROCKS FOR CHILDREN ARE REAL "CREATIONS"

Youngsters Are Bound By No One Mode, But Their Dress May Be Simple Or Sumptuous

The open season for children's parties embraces 12 months a year because these juvenile festivities are almost invariably attached to birthdays.

Yet, many special days, such as Easter and May Day, offer sufficient excuse for parties, if no birthday is conveniently near.

As the American child grows more and more sophisticated the professional entertainer has become more in demand, to tell stories, lead in games, and keep things moving merrily.

The time honored Punch and Judy show, the always fascinating height of hand performer, jugglers, and clowns, may be counted on to please no matter how often they have been seen before.

Party frocks for children are today as truly "creations" as the lovely things their mothers wear. And like their mothers they are bound by no one mode, but may be dressed with Puritan simplicity or oriental sumptuousness, to suit their types.

A sober little girl with straight heavy bobbed hair naturally looks best without ruffles, but a gay little blonde with curls seems to have a peculiar affinity for frills.

Borrowed from one of her mother's favorite modes of the day is the straight long waisted, sleeveless frock, devoid of ornament save a narrow belt or sash. But if juvenile arms are too thin, sleeves of any desired length are more becoming.

Any material from velvet and taffeta to organdie and handkerchief linen may be chosen for the small maid's party frock, and indeed, all of those materials and others may be seen on equally as smart children at the self-same party.

IT'S ABOUT THE TIME OF YEAR!

Separate State Wage Agreements May Yet Be Made In Coal Field

Indianapolis, Ind., March 23.—Separate state wage agreements between operators and miners may avert the national coal strike called for April 1st, it was learned today at national mine workers headquarters here. HUNG VICTIM TO AN APPLE TREE AFTER STRANGLING HIM

Brookville, Pa., March 22.—The story of a brutal murder in which an innocent man paid with his life for the act of his brother, was brought to light in the Brookville Jail last Tuesday in an alleged confession by James Puglise, an Italian, who, the police say, admitted he took part in the choking to death of Sylvester Carlise, also an Italian, on the night of February 23. Puglise, aged 32, with James Mazerella and Puglise's child wife, who is not yet 14, are being held in connection with Carlise's death.

Two weeks ago Puglise and his wife were arrested on a technical charge of selling liquor without a license. Later, Mazerella was taken into custody. Last night, the authorities say, Puglise confessed he pinned Carlise's arms while Mazerella threw a rope around his neck and his neck and slowly strangled him to death. Mrs. Puglise is being held as a material witness, having been named by her husband in the alleged confession.

The body was dragged to a small apple tree nearby and hung there at the end of the rope. When the body was found the following morning, Carlise was generally believed to have ended his own life.

Some time ago, the authorities learned, Mazerella was shot in the jaw by Charles Carlise, a brother of the murdered man. It is the belief of the authorities that Mazerella planned the crime in order to even the old score he had with the brother of the dead man. The whereabouts of Charles Carlise is not known, it was said.

The Palm Crab.

The Palm crab, of the Indian ocean, is famous for its strength. He lives in coconut groves, where he digs holes beneath the trees and hides. He is very fond of coconuts. He tears the husk from the nuts, with his powerful claws, and uses this husk to line his bed. He always opens the end of the coconut that contains the soft spot, which may be hampered with his claw until an opening is made. Sometimes he seizes it so firmly with his claw that he can dash the nut against a rock and break it to pieces. But the husk has to be torn away, shred by shred, first.

Time on Shipboard.

"Two bells," "three bells," "four bells," etc., signified as the method of telling time aboard ship, on account of the twenty-four hours being divided into six watches of four hours each, thus having some one awake all the time. The passage of time was so noisily announced except to the watch on deck, so the bell was struck to show how many half-hours had passed. Thus "seven bells" would mean seven half-hours had elapsed, this might mean half-past three, half-past eleven, or half-past seven.

Boxwood Hard to Obtain.

In this country we once used tons of the Turkish and Persian boxwood for engraving, but this finely textured wood is now difficult to obtain and very high priced. Ordinarily we use 3,000 tons of it annually.

ATTACKS CHARACTER OF LITTLE GIRL IN TRIAL OF RICKARD

New York, N. Y., March 23.—Attacking the character of Nellie Gaslo, aged 12, one of the witnesses against George L. Rickard, defense counsel Max Stuer today made her admit being a check forger. Under Stuer's questioning the little girl said she forged the name of Julius Berlinger, of the Echo Cement Company where she worked. She made out checks to Frank Hurley, a fictitious character, signed Berlinger's name to them, endorsed and cashed them. "Three checks for $30, $56, and $26 were specified in the testimony. The Gaslo girl also admitted having entered a house, the name of the owner not being given, believing the family was out so that she could steal some money. She also admitted once having forced open a drawer and stolen stamps.

Ulster Frontier Takes On Warlike Aspect As Snipers' Rifles Bark

Dublin, Ireland, March 23.—On the Ulster frontier at Caledon, County Tyrone, snipers' rifles were barking defiance across the border today. Along the Monahan frontier Ulster volunteers and Irish Republican troops are facing each other across a narrow no-man's land. Intrenchments have been thrown up and both sides are ready for the threatened civil war. The trouble has been caused by a series of raids by Sinn Fein extremists. A detachment of Ulster Constabulary has been rushed to the scene to protect the frontier. Bomb Thrown Into Church Belfast, Ireland, March 23.—A bomb was hurled into the entrance to Saint Matthews Catholic Church during a Lenten day service last night and two women were terribly wounded by the explosion. Two boys were killed by the sniping throughout the city and several other bombs were thrown.

Something About Farms and Farming in Pennsylvania--What State College Extension Is Doing

By M. S. McDowell, Chief Extension Bureau, Penn State College

"Pennsylvania is a great agricultural state. During the last ten years she has risen in rank from sixteenth to seventh in the value of her agricultural products. This is not generally understood by our own people. The last census shows that the value of the land, buildings, machinery and livestock on the 202,000 farms of Pennsylvania represents an investment of $1,729,353,000. If to these figures be added the value of the crops for the year in which the census was taken we have a grand total of over $2,100,000,000.

There are some other facts indicated by the census which are encouraging not alone to the farmers but to every citizen. Much has been said about the increase in tenant farming. In 1900 twenty six per cent of the farms of the state were operated by tenants and seventy two and four-tenths per cent by owners. In 1910 twenty three and three-tenths per cent were operated by tenants and seventy four and nine tenths per cent by owners. In 1920 twenty one and nine tenths per cent were operated by tenants and seventy five and nine-tenths per cent by owners. Certainly these figures do not bear out the idea that tenant farming is on the increase.

Every citizen of the commonwealth is interested in the welfare of agriculture. We all have an interest even though the necessity for such interest is not appreciated. The farmer working as an individual cannot perform many things which are essential to the development of his own business and which are equally essential to the development of the state or the country as a whole. The people who are engaged in industry must be fed and clothed and the raw materials for these vital necessities are agricultural products. Without them, industry will stagnate. The farmer must be progressive and is entitled to a reasonable profit for his labor.

These facts justify the appropriations of public funds, both Federal and State for the development of agriculture. The Land Grant Colleges were founded by an Act of Congress in 1862 and today are performing three functions:

1. Teaching agriculture to resident students.

2. Research or experimental work which means the development of truths which may improve the practice of agriculture.

3. Extension service.
The principles underlying the conception and development of the Extension Service are similar in other states. The Extension idea grew out of the need for a means to put to practical and general use the information which has been accumulated by the Experiment Stations.

The Smith-Lever Act, providing funds to the Land Grant Colleges for Extension work in Agriculture and Home Economics, passed by Congress in 1914, which is the foundation upon which we now stand, was meant to furnish a channel through which help and information and assistance could be given. Section 2 of this Act defines what shall constitute Extension work: "It shall consist of the giving of instruction and practical demonstrations in agriculture and home economics to persons not attending or resident in said college in the several communities, and the imparting to such persons information on said subject through field demonstrations, pub-

SOMETHING ABOUT FARMS
AND FARMING IN PENN'A—
COLLEGE EXTENSION WORK

Obviously, therefore, Extension work within the state is for the dissemination of information and must be educational in character.

This legislation was not made in the interest of the farmers alone but because its results would be helpful directly or indirectly, to the whole people. There can be no justification for the expenditure of public funds, Federal, State or County, if such expenditure is not in some way in the interest of all the people.

The impression persists that "educational work" means more production without regard to other factors which necessarily influence production, that the securing of better markets and fairer prices is in no way connected with an Extension program. This view is erroneous.

Reducing the unit cost of production and securing an adequate and a just price for the article produced are vital factors of interest to both producer and consumer. Both of these factors are susceptible to the application of educational methods and come within the province of Extension activities. The Extension service, however, is advisory in character and does not represent the management and direction which would undertake to act as buying agent for the fertilizer or other supplies needed by the farmer or as the selling agent to dispose of the wool, milk, potatoes or any other product, any more than it would undertake to cut and put into the barn the alfalfa which might be grown under its advice and with its assistance or to milk the purebred cows which might have been purchased as a result of educational propaganda looking toward the use of better and more efficient animal machinery. The relation of Extension activities is the same to both propositions; that is, advisory. It is its business to encourage and advise existing organizations and to foster the formation of organizations for specific purposes where needed. Commercial and business transactions as such, should be carried on by the people themselves through organizations developed for that purpose.

A business transaction, whether it be buying supplies or selling a product, is not a remunerative proposition unless it pays all the expenses involved and leaves a profit over and above what could have been obtained through normal channels. It is manifestly improper that the overhead expenses of a business transaction should be paid from public funds. A field operation or demonstration that could show results in more economical production only by having an extension employee do the actual work of sowing the seed, applying the fertilizers, operating the spray machinery, harvesting the crop, etc., would certainly not be recognized as a legitimate piece of Extension work.

Similarly, a commercial transaction that can show a saving only because a public agency performs some of the necessary functions in the transaction cannot be considered a legitimate undertaking to promote. It is not the function of the Extension service to engage in commercial transactions.

The making of more money for the farmer should and will be an important result, but, in general, the primary business of Extension is to furnish information the application of which will bring about that result.

If available information and methods of applying it are not valuable in bringing greater financial profit as well as in promoting a better and a broader community spirit, then there is no justification for Extension work as such.

The necessity for local organization in order to develop a definite program, is obvious. The County Farm Bureau is the organization which serves as the local point of contact.

It is essential that the people of a County or a community take upon themselves certain responsibilities in determining the particular lines of work to be undertaken and in executing that work. In the last analysis, accomplishment will depend upon what the people themselves do rather than upon the Extension service itself. Such an organization must, necessarily be non-political, non-sectarian and non-commercial. The business of the organization is conducted in its details by an Executive Committee designated for that purpose. The county agent is the local representative of the Extension Service and his local expenses, such as travel in the County, official equipment, telephone, stenographic assistance, etc., are paid by the Farm Bureau. All Extension work in a county is done through the Farm Bureau organization. The Farm Bureau originally were formed for the purpose of cooperating with the College in developing Extension work and thus far they have devoted themselves almost entirely to this purpose.

Organized work is under way in sixty three of the sixty seven counties of the state.

Lines of Activity

Agronomy

The work in Agronomy during the past year has been devoted to conducting demonstrations along the lines of soil and crop improvement. In connection with these, field meetings were held at a time when the results showed up the most effectively. No efforts have been made to hold meetings other than those bearing upon the community problems or upon demonstrations under way. Only a few meetings of a general character have been attended. It has been the policy to emphasize strongly one or two phases of work. Potato and corn improvement was emphasized mostly during the past year.

One hundred ten corn variety demonstrations in 36 counties proved that general planting of the best varieties would mean an average increase in yield of seventeen bushels per acre.

There were six wheat variety demonstrations in five counties and seven oats variety demonstrations in seven counties.

Six hundred bushels of seed wheat of one variety showing good results was planted last season as a result of this work.

Thirty five potato variety demonstrations in 16 counties showed that Russets, including Petoskey, Rural New Yorker No. 2 and Sir Walter Raleigh are the varieties that give the best results.

Alfalfa and Soybeans are other crops which have been included in this demonstration work.

Twenty nine lime and fertilizer demonstrations have been under way in 17 counties. Surveys for tile drainage systems were made on nine farms.

Animal Husbandry

Hogs

Forage Crop Campaign. The two outstanding factors relating to Pennsylvania's summer pork industry are: first, forage or pasture; second, hogging off corn. The use of pasture supplemented with a proper grain mixture is the most economical method of producing pork. "Hogging off" corn has also been shown to be both a practical and profitable practice. To bring these two facts to the general attention of the farmers interested in economical feeding, a cost account book was prepared and an accurate record of all items entering into the cost of producing pork on pasture was kept by the farmers. These records were closely supervised. The demonstrations were watched with a great deal of interest by communities.

Promoting Purebred Hogs. Pennsylvania policy for 1920—"Not how many hogs but how good."

Twenty-eight Swine Breeders organizations were perfected. There were on December 1st, 1920, 34 organizations comprising 423 members.

New purebred hog owners invested in 1920 $5297.50 for 31 outstanding boars and $12,101.50 for 189 meritorious brood matrons.

Sheep

Wool Marketing. Four hundred fifty thousand pounds of wool have been pooled by the different county organizations.

Two hundred twenty-five thousand pounds of this pool have been graded. No sales have been made due to market conditions.

Ram Associations. Nine Ram Associations were organized in 1920.

Sheep Management. Three thousand dollars worth of pure-bred sheep were selected for growers of the state and dipping demonstrations were held with a total attendance of 30 persons.

Miscellaneous. Two thousand pounds of paper twine and 11 dipping tanks were purchased as a result of sheep management demonstration work.

Dairy Husbandry

Investigation shows that the cost of producing milk may be reduced by the elimination of the low producing cow, by improved feeding methods and by increasing the average production per cow through the raising of cattle from good pure-bred sires and the highest producing and most profitable cows in the herd.

Cow Testing Associations. The cow testing association has been an important factor in eliminating unprofitable cows and its improving feeding methods. Fifty-three cow testing associations were organized in 1920, making a total of 71 associations now in operation, with a membership of 1922 persons, representing 24,215 cows. One thousand four hundred and thirty one cows were tested by individuals, the total number on test being 25,646. Seven hundred seventy one cows were discarded as a result of the test.

If the average production of our cows in the state could be improved to the extent of 1000 pounds of milk per cow, and this is not an unreasonable thing to hope for, it would mean an added income of $27,000,000.00 annually.

Bull Associations. A special effort has been made to increase the use

HOW the cost of building quality tires has been brought down to the lowest level in history was explained by H. S. Firestone, President of the Company, to the stockholders at the annual meeting on December 15, 1921.

1. All inventories and commitments at or below the market.
2. Increased manufacturing efficiency and volume production reduced factory overhead 58%.
3. Selling costs reduced 38%.

Mr. Firestone stated, "This reduction in prices is made possible by our unusually advantageous buying facilities, and the enthusiasm, loyalty and determination of our 100% stockholding organization."

"Due credit must be given to Firestone dealers who are selling Firestone tires on a smaller margin of profit. This brings every Firestone saving direct to the car-owner."

The saving through first cost plus the saving through high mileage doubles Firestone economy and is daily adding new fame to the Firestone principle of service—

PUBLIC IS GETTING WHAT IT WANTS IN THE MOVIE SHOW

Hobart Bosworth, Noted Producer, Calls On The Theatre Patrons To Stamp Out Bad Films.

MAJORITY DECENT

By ROBERT A. DONALDSON

(United Press Staff Correspondent) San Francisco, March 21 (United Press).—When the public wants decent motion pictures, it will get them, and not until then.

That is the opinion of Hobart Bosworth, veteran actor and producer.

"The public thinks the motion picture industry is rotten," said Bosworth. "Well, the motion picture industry is rotten."

"It is a disagreeable truth that the reason that so many films are being made with the sex appeal is because the public packs the theatres when such films are shown."

"As long as this is true, the public is going to get that kind of films."

"Personally, I believe that the public is just beginning to adopt a thumbs down attitude on this type of film. It is a good thing. It is much better to have the public finally make up its mind to do this, than to have it done by some outside influence."

"We need better films. They are the great source of pleasure and enjoyment, of clean amusement and education in America today. Their future will be along the same lines as the development of great literature or drama."

Bosworth recently left Hollywood, and moved to the new Pacific studios film colony at San Mateo, fifteen miles from San Francisco.

"I left Hollywood essentially because Southern California is worked out as far as locations go. In this district one has much greater choice in the selection of locations."

Bosworth believes that the breaking up of Hollywood colony would be a mere foolishness.

"The reason the Hollywood colony has received such unfavorable publicity is because of the prominence of film stars who are for the majority centered there, and because of a certain small undesirable element which has recently been in the limelight."

"This undesirable element is not confined to the film colony. There is the same sort of element in society. Hence society scandals. But in most cases the people concerned are not important enough to warrant any notoriety."

"But, as in all other walks of life, this element is small in the film colony, and you may be assured that the big men of the film world are doing their best to uproot and put it out of business."

"The majority of the film folk are decent, ordinary people, who lead a quiet life. Many of them are married and have their homes and kiddies. And this class, which is the large majority, is more concerned about the home-fires than any other class of people in American life—because they find it harder to obtain real retirement."

"Take that into consideration when you discuss Hollywood and the thousands of people in the motion picture industry upon whom you are throwing mud because of the notoriety which has come to a small handful."

Making Life Livable.
Somebody may always be taking the joy out of life, yet could not easily do so if more people were engaged in putting joy into life. To make life livable we must meet and overcome every influence whose tendency is to destroy human contentment and happiness."

Why "Bootleg" Whisky.
"Bootleg" is a pure Americanism, that grew up among the stills of the mountain country. Bootleg liquor was liquor that was secretly carried in the leg of the moonshiner's boot, because no tax had been paid on it. Usually the man who thus carried it was a native who had distilled himself, and he became known as a bootlegger and the liquor he carried as bootleg whisky. Nowadays, of course, it is any form of liquor sold in violation of the law."

Must Eliminate Most Of Congress Appropriation To Get Real Economy

(By United Press)

Washington, March 21.—President Harding and Budget Director Dawes are on the wrong trail in their hunt for governmental economy, William E. Redfield, Secretary of commerce under Woodrow Wilson, believes. Harding and Dawes, "innocently or otherwise" are raising false hopes among the people, he said.

"They are hunting at the wrong end of Pennsylvania Avenue," Redfield said. "In the halls of Congress is where the solution can be found—not in the departments. I have a great admiration for Mr. Dawes, but he is barking up the wrong tree—the littlest tree. And he is helpless to do otherwise."

Only limited temporary economies which in the end cost the people more can be achieved by trimming department budgets, he said.

"There are certain fixed charges which the departments must meet if they are to function as the people demand," he said. "These charges can be cut very little. On the other hand Congress dips into the 'pork barrel' for hundreds of millions of dollars for projects of all sorts to appease the demands of their constituents. That is where governmental extravagance is being practiced. And that is where it must be stopped if economy is to be affected and taxes reduced."

"First of all the people represented by the chambers of commerce and other bodies, must stop their pressure up on Congress for new buildings, new roads, new river improvements and the thousands of other demands that constitute a drain on the national treasury. Congressmen must subordinate selfish interests to national service by turning their backs on appropriation demands."

"We will have economy and lower taxes when the people and congress keep their hands out of the 'pork barrel'."

Too Good for Such a King.
On the birthday of King George III of England, in the year 1794, Mr. Arnold, a London watchmaker, presented the king with a repeating watch he had made for him. The king and the royal family were filled with delight and admiration for this wonderful piece of work, as this repeating watch was less than a silver dime in diameter, and contained 120 parts. It weighed five pennyweights, seven and three-fourths grains.

Worry a Factor in Disease.
It is probably true that more people are crippled or weakened by the fear of disease than by the disease itself. In the opinion of the medical correspondent of the London Times, Worry is a grave factor in disease. The answer is, of course, don't fear disease and don't worry. For if one does not fear disease and does not worry, he stands a far better chance of avoiding and overcoming ailments than if he does both those useless and debilitating things.

Typographical Errors!
"The bride was gowned in white lace. The bridesmaids' gowns were pink. The whole color scheme of the decorations was pink."—New York paper. Probably the bridegroom was also in the pink of condition.

Beethoven's Marvelous Music.
The mysterious charms of Goethe's song of Mignon, to which Beethoven wrote the music, is that the song is the expression of the same awe-struck yearning which walls and thunders through the music of the master. In the melody alone all the wild vagueness and dim aspiration of the song are manifest, and only because the union is perfect is the impression uniform. Should Wilhelm Meister be lost to literature the blossom of Mignon's life would still bloom in the music.—George William Curtis.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards' produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets, while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative. No gripping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action. If you have a "dark brown mouth" and bad breath—a dull, tired feeling, sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime. Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them—15c and 30c.

MR. BUSINESS MAN

Are you building your body as fast as you tear it down with your intense application to business? It's necessary these days to dig in as you never did before to make things go. But in your hustle and bustle, be sure to take good care of your body. And there's no better way to build than to drink lots of milk. Milk is the greatest system-builder that Nature has produced and it will replace the waste brought about by your hard work.

Drink milk at your meals—drink milk when you feel that you need a lunch—drink milk at any old time—and drink plenty of it.

Essex Coach $1345 F.O.B. Detroit

To See It is to Want It The Price Makes It Easy

All want such advantages as the Essex Coach combines. They were beyond most pockets in the past.

This new type gives them in full measure—at little more than the cost of the open models.

Is it any wonder the Coach met such instant success? Or that its first welcome has steadily grown?

Prior to the Essex Coach, consider what a buyer could get around $1400. He had the choice of a closed car without distinction and little performance ability. If he wanted better performance he had no choice at that price except an open car.

The Coach now couples the beauty, comfort and luxury of an unusually fine closed body, with the exceptional reliability and performance of the well-proved Essex chassis. But it does not mean greatly added price.

And it continues the savings of its first cost in its economy of fuel, oil and tires, as well as small cost of upkeep. Come see the Coach. You will surely want it. Price is now no bar to owning the fine quality, performance and distinction that heretofore cost more than most men wanted to pay.

Has These Fine Car Details

Dash controlled ventilator. Wind and rainproof windshield. Fine quality plate glass windows. Sun visor. Luggage and tool locker, opened from rear. Newest type easy operating crank-handle lifts on door-windows. Four hinges on each door, and fittings that hold doors solid—very important. Fine texture, long wearing upholstery and rugs. Radiator shutters and motor for efficient motor control. Cord tires.

See this beautiful car on display at the new home of the Hudson-Essex family.

Plan Your Awnings Before The Rush Comes

There's going to be a rush for awnings one of these days and you're going to be a lot better off if you'll plan your awnings now and have them ready to put up as soon as the weather permits.

I have a really wonderful display of awning materials and they come from the best designers of such things that the country has.

When Heine Was a Tramp.

Herrich Heine was a tramp. He trudged all of one summer through Saxony in an old coat. He was going to Weimar to flatter—that seems odd—Goethe. As he wandered through the Harz mountains counting the speck he meant to make to the great German poet, he plucked plums by the wayside. When he reached his destination he forgot his enigma and could only stammer his praise of Saxon plums. The railing, cynical exile of Paris, prodding his enemies with a trenchant pen, was that summer lovable as a tramp.—Exchange.

COULD NOT TURN IN BED

Operation Avoided by Taking
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Dayton, Ohio.—"I had such pains that I had to be turned in bed every time I wished to move. They said an operation was necessary. My mother would keep saying: 'Why don't you take Pinkham's, Henrietta?' and I'd say, 'Oh, mamma, it won't help me, I've tried too much.' One day she said, 'Let me get you one bottle of each kind. You won't be out very much if it don't help you.' I don't know if you will believe me or not, but I only took two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine when I began to get relief and I am regular ever since without a pain or a headache.

When I lie down I can get up without help and without pain. I can't begin to tell you how I feel and look. I have begun to gain in weight and look more like I ought to. I think every day of ways I have been helped. Any one who does not believe me can write to me and I will tell them what shape I was in. I am ready to do anything I can to help your medicine."—Mrs. HENRIETTA MILLER, 127 Sprague St., Dayton, O.

About Rabbits.
California produces the finest fur-bearing rabbits in the world. Texas is a close second. Utah and Oklahoma are great producing states. The rabbit thrives upon alfalfa hay and barley. All of these may be had in California 205 days in the year. The ermine rabbit, a close rival of the little white-furred weasel, has been gained by crossing the Russian white rabbit, which has the color, with the Himalayan rabbit, which has the soft under fur, and again with the Angora rabbit, which has the requisite length of coat.

A Fish as a Mousetrap.
A large brook trout was caught by J. E. Barbour of Paterson, N.J., in the St. John's river, Gaspé, Canada, June 20, 1921, and when opened it was found that its stomach contained nine mice, five of them quite large.

PENNSYLVANIA HAS FORGED AHEAD IN TRAINING BOYS

Schools With Trades.

PRACTICAL WORK

Harrisburg, Pa., March 21—(United Press)—Pennsylvania is rapidly forging to the front in vocational education and now stands foremost among the states in the number of federally aided vocational industrial schools and in number of pupils enrolled, according to the last report of the Federal Board of Vocational Education.

With scarcely an exception every school district in the state of the first and second class has provided some form of trade and industrial education, the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction reports. During the past year 6,628 persons in Pennsylvania have been given vocational industrial courses in public schools which were aided from State and Federal funds.

Vocational industrial courses are of three types. First, all day instruction in preparation for a trade. Second, part-time trade courses which combine with the regular curriculum between the schools and industry whereby the school teaches the book or technical side of the trade while the industrial plant teaches shop work to the boy under real shop conditions with the boys in such courses alternating between the school room and the manufacturing plant. Third, evening or dull season trade extension courses for persons regularly employed in the trade for the further mastery of which additional instruction is desired.

In the new high school at Allentown industrial courses are conducted in the trades of carpentry, cabinet making, pattern making and printing. At Erie eight trades are taught in the day high schools. One of the foremost examples of the part-time cooperative industrial education in the United States is to be found at York. Boys who wish to obtain a high school education and at the same time learn a trade may enter this course. A boy works two weeks in an industrial plant where he is an apprentice then he returns to school for the next two weeks of high school work. Another boy takes his place in the shop for two weeks and thus they alternate back and forth.

plot was overheard, in part, at least, by some habitue of the place who was too drunk to get it entirely straight and intelligible. The plotters were four of Cinnaham's men, and, as Branderby got it, they were planning to steal a locomotive. Do you know anything about that?"

"I do. The engine was stolen all right, that very night. Kirgan, our master-mechanic, has known it was gone, but he has been keeping quiet in hopes he'd be able to find the engine without making any public stir about it."

"The story, as it has been handed on to Branderby, is pretty badly muddled," the editor went on. "There was something in it about an attempt to wreck and rob the Fast Mail, and something else about sending a note to somebody at the Bullard—a note that 'would do the business,' was the way it was put."

"That note was sent to Mr. Norcross," I broke in excitedly, taking a running jump at the guess.

"If you will wait until Branderby comes in, he may be able to give you more of the particulars," Cantrell was beginning to say; but good gosh! I couldn't wait. I was scared stiff for fear I shouldn't be able to get back to the round-house before Kirgan started out on that engine-rescuing trip.

"That's enough," I gasped. "I'm gone!" and I tumbled down the two flights of stairs and sprinted for the railroad yard, reaching the round-house not one half-second too soon. Kirgan was there, with Gorchor and two firemen. They had a light engine out on the tank track and were filling her with water.

"They took Mr. Norcross with them on the Ten-Sixteen," was all I could say and then I guess my late electric knock-out got in its work to pay for the quick sprint down from the newspaper office, for I reeled over into Kirgan's arms and sort of half fainted, it seemed.

Because, when I came to, right good again, Kirgan had me up on the fireman's box, with an arm around me to hold me there. Billy Gorchor was on the other side of the cab, niggling at the throttle, and the light engine was chugging it off about fifty miles an hour on the straight piece of track between Portal City and Arroyo.

CHAPTER VIII

A Close Call

At the "Y" siding we stopped—with out going on to the gravel track where Gorchor had seen the lost 1016—and Kirgan and I got off with a lantern. This was because, on the way down, I had managed to tell the big master-mechanic about the Cantrell talk, though I hadn't succeeded in making him believe that it accounted for Mr. Norcross' drop-out. Just the same he humored me by having Billy Gorchor stop, and now he was trying to make me take it sort of slow and easy as we stumbled out toward the stem of the "Y." That was Kirgan's way. He was as hard as nails with a gang of men, but he could be as soft-hearted as any woman when a fellow was all in. And he knew I wasn't half "at myself" yet, physically.

"Don't get too much hope up, Jimmie," he was saying, as we humped along around the crooking track of the "Y." "We ain't goin' to find anything out yonder but a rusty loggin' track and that broken rail connection. You see, I've been here before, and I know."

He was as right as could be. When we reached the end of the "Y" there was the broken connection, just as he'd said. The old saw-mill track was still there, leading off in the dark up the gulch, but the two switch rails had been taken out and the switch itself was as rusty as if it hadn't been used in years.

"What you heard from Mr. Cantrell may have been all true enough," Kirgan said, while I stood swallowing hard and staring down at the broken rail connection, "only it didn't have anything to do with the big boss. Them thugs was probably plannin' to wreck the Mail, all right, and they came down here to do it. The Lord only knows why they didn't do it; praps there wasn't time enough, after they'd got the 'Sixteen in on the gravel track."

I only just about half heard what he was saying. He had the lantern, and its light fell squarely upon a cross-tie a foot or two beyond where we were standing. It was the last tie in the empty string from which the two rails had been taken up to break the connection with the lighter saw-mill track steel, and what I was looking at was a fresh spike hole; fresh beyond all question of doubt because there was a clean new splinter of the wood sticking up beside it—a splinter that had been broken out when the spike was pulled.

I took the lantern from Kirgan in my one good hand, and he stood there waiting for me while I walked on out to the chopped-off end of the saw-mill track, examining the loose ties as I went along. There were fresh spike holes in some of the others; just one here and there. But that was enough. After I had knelt to hold the lantern close to the rails of the rusty timber track I knew my hunch was all right.

"Come here, Mart!" I called, and when he came, I showed him the new holes and new wheel-sparks on the old rusty rails of the timber track that proved as clear as daylight that an engine or a train had been over them away this side of the rains and the snows that had rusted them.

Kirgan didn't say a word—not to me. He just took one look at the rubbed rails and then yelled back to Gorchor to run out on the "X." What followed went like clockwork. There were tools, a spike-puller and a driving-nail, on the light engine's tender.

and while the two firemen were throwing them off, Kirgan made a couple of swift measurements with his pocket tape.

"These two, right here, boys," he ordered, indicating a pair of rails in the other leg of the "Y," and in less than no time the two rails were up and relaid to bridge the gap of the broken connection.

I suppose we poked along into the black heart of the Timber range for as much as five or six miles before the engine headlight showed us the remains of the old saw-mill camp lying in a little pocket-like valley from the sides of which all the mill timber had been cut. The camp had been long deserted. There were perhaps a dozen shacks of all sizes and shapes, and with a single exception they were all dilapidated and dismantled, some with the roofs falling in.

The one exception was the stout log building which had probably served as the mill-gang commissary and store. The ties at this end of the line were so rotten with age that our engine was grinding a good half of them to powder as she edged up, and a little below the switch that had formerly led in to the mill, Kirgan gave Gorchor the stop signal.

After we had piled off, there wasn't any question raised as to what we should do. Kirgan had taken a hammer from Gorchor's tool-box, and he was the one who led the way straight across the little creek and up the hill to the commissary.

When we reached the building we found the windows all boarded up and the door fastened with a strong hasp and a bright new-truss padlock—the only new thing in sight. Kirgan swung his hammer just once and the lock went spinning off down the slope and fell with a splash into the creek. Then he pushed the door open with his foot, and shoved in; and for just one half-second I was afraid to follow—afraid of what we might find in that gloomy-looking log warehouse, with its blinded windows and locked door.

While I was nerving myself and stumbling over the threshold behind Kirgan with the lantern, I heard the boss' voice, and it wasn't the voice of any dead man, not by a long shot! From what he said, and the way he was trimming it up with hot ones, it was evident that he took as for some other crowd that he'd been cussing out before.

The light of the lantern showed us a long room, bare of furnishings, and dark and musty from having been shut up so tight. In the far end there were a couple of bunks built against the log wall. On what had once been the counter of the commissary there was a lot of canned stuff and a box of crackers that had been broken open, and on a bench by the door there was a bucket of water and a tin cup.

The boss was sitting up in one of the bunks and he was still gearing off language in strips at us when we closed on him. He recognized Kirgan first, and then Gorchor. I guess he couldn't see me very well because I was holding the lantern. When he found out who we were, he stopped swearing and got up out of the bunk to put his hand on Mart Kirgan's shoulder. That was the only break he made to show that he was a man, like the rest of us. The next minute he was the big boss again, rapping out his orders as if he had just pushed his desk button to call us in.

Keep Out Heat as Well as Cold.

The Turkish peasants in Asia Minor believe in keeping out the heat as well as the cold, and it is not uncommon to see in many parts of the country people wearing huge coats in the midst of summer, with the thermometer standing at 100 degrees.

Origin of Pews.

The origin of pews for the use of worshippers may be traced back to the time of the Norman nobles. In those days the ordinary church-goer sat on a three-legged stool, while the lords of the land enjoyed a back when at their devotions.

Secret of Terror.

A physician tells the New York Times a story to illustrate the fear of disease. A great novelist once went to consult a famous heart specialist about a plot which was causing him grave anxiety. Before he came the doctor took occasion to read one of his stories which dealt with terror of a child in the dark night. The doctor asked the novelist this question: "Why did you omit to describe what it was the child saw?" "Ah," said the other, "that is my craft. The child did not know what it saw. I would not have the reader know, either. The secret of terror is mystery."

What is Charm?

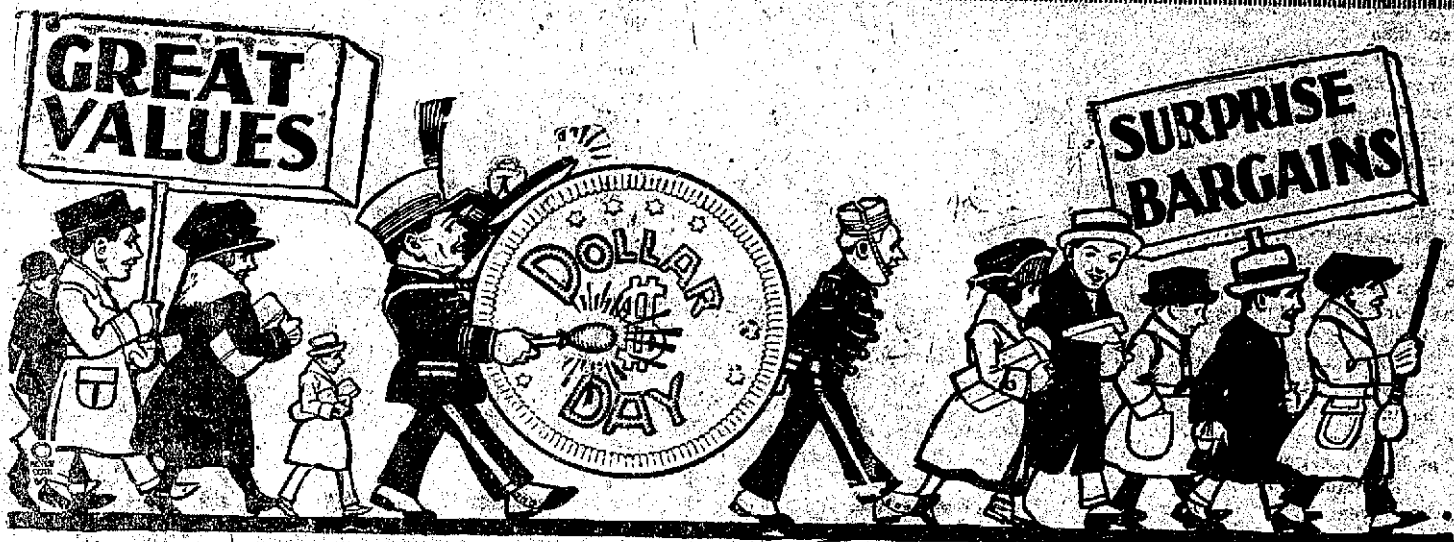

Movie directors have been attempting to define charm in woman. No two of them advance the same definition. Sir J. M. Barrie in "What Every Woman Knows" says that "it's a sort of blood on a woman. If you have it, you don't need to have anything else; and if you don't have it, it doesn't matter what else you have." That explains it, generally. But a special providence has seen to it that no two men agree on a detailed definition. Otherwise our lives might be devoted entirely to gun fighting for the privilege of marrying the same charmer. Toledo Blade.

Thumb Down.

In the gladiatorial combats which took place in ancient Rome a wounded man would sometimes call for mercy by holding up his forefinger. The spectators would thereupon either wave their handkerchiefs in token of mercy, or condemn him to death by holding out their clenched fist with the thumb down.

plot was overheard, in part, at least, by some habitue of the place who was too drunk to get it entirely straight and intelligible. The plotters were four of Clannahan's men, and, as Branderby got it, they were planning to steal a locomotive. Do you know anything about that?"

"I do. The engine was stolen all right, that very night. Kirgan, our master-mechanic, has known it was gone, but he has been keeping quiet in hopes he'd be able to find the engine without making any public stir about it."

"The story, as it has been handed on to Branderby, is pretty badly muddled," the editor went on. "There was something in it about an attempt to wreck and rob the Fast Mail, and something else about sending a note to somebody at the Bullard—a note that 'would do the business,' was the way it was put."

"That note was sent to Mr. Norcross!" I broke in excitedly, taking a running jump at the guess.

"If you will wait until Branderby comes in, he may be able to give you more of the particulars," Cantrell was beginning to say; but good gosh—I couldn't wait. I was scared stiff for fear I shouldn't be able to get back to the round-house before Kirgan started out on that engine-rescuing trip."

"That's enough," I gasped. "I'm gone!" and I tumbled down the stairs of stairs and sprinted for the railroad yard, reaching the round-house not one half-second too soon. Kirgan was there, with Gorchier and two firemen. They had a light engine out on the tank track and were filling her with water.

"They took Mr. Norcross with them on the Ten-Sixteen!" was all I could say and then I guess my late electric knock-out got in its work to pay for the quick sprint down from the newspaper office, for I keeled over into Kirgan's arms and sort of half-fainted, it seemed.

Because, when I came to, right good again, Kirgan had me up on the fireman's box, with an arm around me to hold me there; Billy Gorchier was on the other side of the cab, niggling at the throttle; and the light engine was clicking off about fifty miles an hour on the straight piece of track between Portal City and Arroyo.

CHAPTER VIII

A Close Call

At the "Y" siding, we stopped—with out going on to the gravel track where Gorchier had seen the lost 1016—and Kirgan and I got off with a lantern. This was because, on the way down, I had managed to tell the big master-mechanic about the Cantrell talk, though I hadn't succeeded in making him believe that it accounted for Mr. Norcross' drop-out. Just the same he humored me by having Billy Gorchier stop, and now he was trying to make me take it sort of slow and easy as we stumbled out toward the stem of the "Y."

That was Kirgan's way. He was as hard as nails with a gang of men, but he could be as soft-hearted as any woman when a fellow was all in. And he knew I wasn't half "at myself" yet, physically.

"Don't get too much hope up, Jimmie," he was saying, as we humped along around the crooking track of the "Y." "We ain't goin' to find anything out yonder, but a rusty loggin' track and that broken rail connection. You see, I've been here before, and I know."

"I've been calling you on every phone I could think of," was the way she began; and then: "Where is Mr. Van Britt?"

I told her about the wreck, and said I was afraid he hadn't got back yet. I heard something that sounded like a muffled and half-impatient, "Oh, dear!" and then she went on. "I have just had a phone message from Mr. Cantrell, the editor of the Mountaineer. He called the house to try to find Major Kendrick. He has heard something which may explain about Mr. Norcross. He said he didn't want to put it on the wire."

"That was enough for me. I'll go right over to the Mountaineer office," I told her; and in just about two shakes of a dead lamb's tail, I was standing at Mr. Cantrell's elbow in his little den on the third floor of the newspaper building across the avenue.

"Mrs. Macneer telephoned you?" he asked, pushing his bunch of copy paper aside.

"Yes; just a minute ago."

"I'll give you what I have, and you may do what you please with it. One of our young men—Branderby—has discovered—in some way that he didn't care to explain over the phone—that there was a plot of some kind con-and while the two firemen were throwing them off, Kirgan made a couple of swift measurements with his pocket tape.

"These two, right here, boys," he ordered, indicating a pair of rails in the other leg of the "Y," and in less than no time the two rails were up and relaid to bridge the gap of the broken connection.

I suppose we poked along into the black heart of the Timber range for as much as five or six miles before the engine headlight showed us the remains of the old saw-mill camp lying in a little pocket-like valley from the sides of which all the mill timber had been cut. The camp had been long deserted. There were perhaps a dozen shacks of all sizes and shapes, and with a single exception they were all dilapidated and dismantled, some with the roofs falling in.

The one exception was the stout log building which had probably served as the mill-gang commissary and store. The ties at this end of the line were so rotten with age that our engine was grinding a good half of them to powder as she edged up, and a little below the switch that had formerly led in to the mill, Kirgan gave Gorchier the stop signal.

After we had piled off, there wasn't any question raised as to what we should do. Kirgan had taken a hammer from Gorchier's tool-box, and he was the one who led the way, straight across the little creek and up the hill to the commissary.

When we reached the building we found the windows all boarded up and the door fastened with a strong hasp and a bright new brass padlock—the only new thing in sight. Kirgan swung his hammer just once and the lock went spinning off down the slope and fell with a splash into the creek. Then he pushed the door open with his foot, and shoved in; and for just one half-second I was afraid to follow—afraid of what we might find in that gloomy-looking log warehouse, with its blinded windows and locked door.

While I was nerving myself and stumbling over the threshold behind Kirgan with the lantern, I heard the boss' voice, and it wasn't the voice of any dead man, not by a long shot! From what he said, and the way he was trimming it up with hot mics, it was evident that he took us for some other crowd that he'd been cussing out before.

The light of the lantern showed us a long room, bare of furnishings, and dark and musty from having been shut up so tight. In the far end, there were a couple of bunks built against the log wall. On what had once been the counter of the commissary there was a lot of canned stuff and a box of crackers that had been broken open, and on a bench by the door there was a bucket of water and a tin cup.

The boss was sitting up in one of the bunks, and he was still leaning off language in strips at us when we closed on him. He recognized Kirgan first, and then Gorchier. I guess he couldn't see me very well because I was holding the lantern. When he found out who we were, he stopped swearing and got up out of the bunk to put his hand on Mart Kirgan's shoulder. That was the only break he made to show that he was a man, like the rest of us. The next minute he was the big boss again, rapping out his orders as if he had just pushed his desk button to call us in.

Keep Out Heat as Well as Cold

The Turkish peasants in Asia Minor believe in keeping out the heat as well as the cold, and it is not uncommon to see in many parts of the country people wearing huge coats in the midst of summer, with the thermometer standing at 100 degrees.

Origin of Pews

The origin of pews for the use of worshippers may be traced back to the time of the Norman nobles. In those days the ordinary church-goer sat on a three-legged stool, while the lords of the land enjoyed a back when at their devotions.

Secret of Terror

A physician tells the New York Times a story to illustrate the fear of disease. A great novelist once went to consult a famous heart specialist about a pain which was causing him grave anxiety. Before he came the doctor took occasion to read one of his stories which dealt with terror of a child in the dark night. The doctor asked the novelist this question: "Why did you omit to describe what it was the child saw?" "Ah," said the other, "that is my craft. The child did not know what it saw. I would not have the reader know, either. The secret of terror is mystery."

What is Charm?

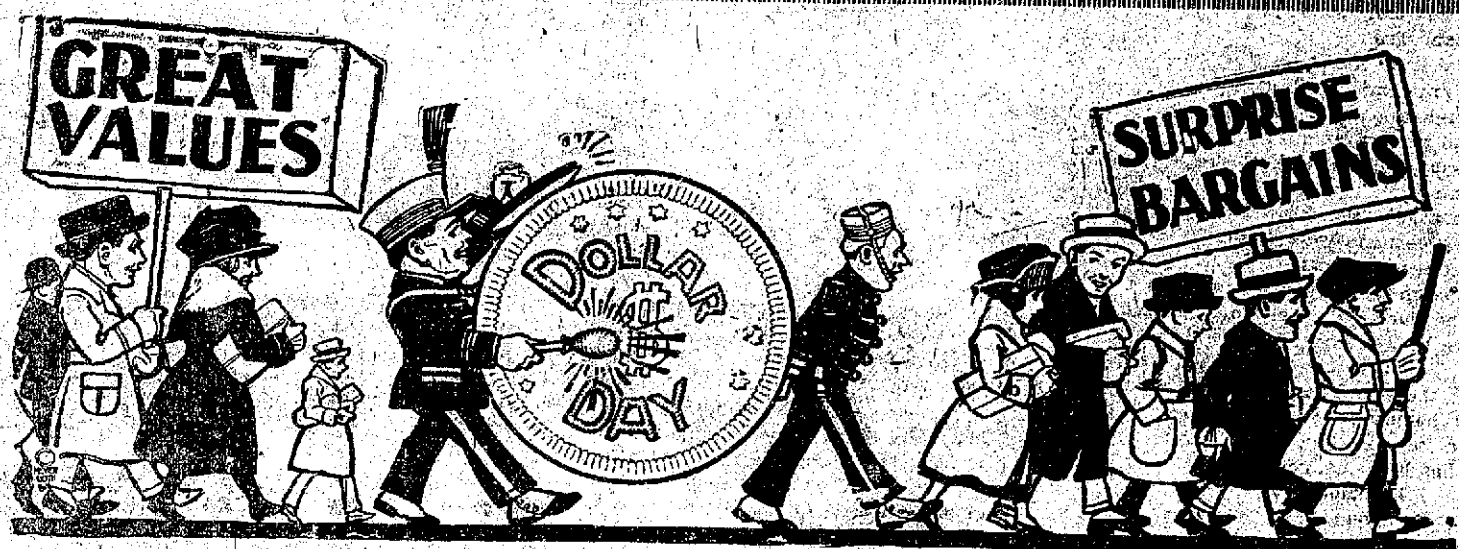

Movie directors have been attempting to define charm in woman. No two of them advance the same definition. Sir J. M. Barrie in "What Every Woman Knows," says that "It's a sort of bloom on a woman. If you have it you don't need to have anything else, and if you don't have it, it doesn't matter what else you have." That explains it generally. But a special providence has seen to it that no two men agree on a detailed definition. Otherwise our lives might be devoted entirely to gun fighting for the privilege of marrying the same charmer. Toledo Blade.

Thumbs Down

In the gladiatorial combats which took place in ancient Rome a wounded man would sometimes call for mercy by holding up his forefinger. The spectators would thereupon either wave their handkerchiefs in token of mercy, or condemn him to death by holding out their clenched fist with the thumb down.

pure bred dairy sires of excellent breeding through the organization of cooperative bull associations. The bull association enables the farmers to use much better bred sires than they could use without the advantage of cooperation.

There are now in the state 22 purebred bull associations with three or more bulls; the total number of bulls in the association being 99 and in individual blocks 15. During 1920 332 other registered dairy bulls were secured and 275 scrub or grade bulls were replaced by pure breeds. In addition 687 registered dairy females were secured and 250 purebred dairy herds established.

Miscellaneous. Assistance has been given in improving methods of feeding through the use of legume hay, silage and protein concentrates. Help in balancing rations was given on 3295 farms.

One thousand two hundred and fifty two agreements were secured for the accredited herd plan.

A campaign for more silos was continued and during the past year 181 silos have been erected.

Forestry. During the year Extension work in Forestry having to do particularly with the development of the farm woodlot has been inaugurated.

Entomology. During the year the Extension work in Entomology included:

25 spraying demonstrations of old orchards in 12 counties.

5 demonstrations for the control of San Jose scale in 2 counties.

1 demonstration for the control of Scurfy scale in 1 county.

1 demonstration for the control of Apple Red Bug in 1 county.

2 demonstrations for the control of Apple Maggot in 2 counties.

4 demonstrations for the control of Potato Aphid in 2 counties.

3 demonstrations for the control of Cabbage Maggot in 2 counties.

1 demonstration, spraying vs. dusting, in 1 county.

Practical demonstrations of recommendations for insect control were carried out at 33 meetings in 24 counties.

Vegetable Gardening.

Strain Demonstrations. Five

strain demonstrations with Copenhagen Market Cabbage conducted in five different counties with seed from five different sources averaged in money returns for the best strain, $732.80 and for the poorest strain $245.60, a difference of $487.20.

Eight strain demonstrations with Danish Ball Head Cabbage conducted in eight different counties with seed from eight different sources averaged in yield per acre for the best strain 17.62 tons and for the poorest strain 10.06 tons, a difference of 7.56 tons.

The differences in yield and also in money returns are due directly to the strain of seed. Fertilizer treatments and cultural methods were the same for all strains.

Tomato Variety Demonstrations. Tomato variety demonstrations carried on in Erie county in which Earliana, Chalk's Early Jewel, Bonny Best, John Baer, Matchless and Stone were used showed John Baer best and Matchless poorest. The latter is evidently too late a variety for Erie county.

Twelve tomato varieties were tested for canning house purposes. The best variety showed a yield of 13.8 tons per acre while the poorest showed a yield of only 7.9 tons per acre a difference of 5.9 tons.

Fertilizer Demonstrations. Fertilizer demonstrations with sweet corn were carried on in Allegheny county. The entire area was limed with one ton of hydrated lime per acre. The best results were obtained with complete fertilizer 4-8-4; the poorest with acid phosphate alone.

In fertilizer demonstrations with tomatoes put on in Erie county, the soil used was so rich and the season so moist that the results of the different treatments did not show any appreciable difference.

Miscellaneous. Demonstrations with cover crops were put on in Erie and Allegheny counties and will be completed next year.

A demonstration in cold frame management is in progress in Delaware county. The soil has been sterilized for the control of Lettuce Drop.

Farm Management.

Farm Accounts. Recognizing the value of farm accounts, account books have been placed with farmers and these books have been followed up during the year in order to demonstrate the value of bookkeeping both to the individual and to the community. These books were totaled, summarized and returned to the farmers through the County Agents with a discussion of each man's book written for the use of the County Agent when returning the book to the farmer.

Cost of Milk Production. Cost of milk production records representing 75 farms with approximately 1000 cows have been completed. Each farmer has been given a summary of his own business as well as the average of all the farms in the association to which he belongs.

Cost of Grape Production. Last winter about 40 records were put out with farmers in Erie County, as their own request, on the cost of producing grapes. These records were collected this fall in so far as they were completed. Thirteen records have been returned by farmers thus far and enough more have promised to complete their records to bring the total up to 25. The price received for grapes this year was so high that most farmers felt that they would make a very good profit on their fruit regardless of what the cost of production might be. This fact accounts for more records not having been carried to completion.

Cost of Wheat Production. Records from 44 farms in 12 different counties were worked up on the cost of producing wheat for 1919. A summary of the records showed the cost to be $1.76. This was less than the previous year's cost but the yield per acre was 19 1-2 bushels rather than 18 bushels, the yield for the previous year. Summaries of this work were returned to the individual farmers.

Plant Diseases.

Four hundred two spraying demonstrations in fifty-seven counties gave an average increase of 74.3 bushels per acre.

Two hundred eighty-nine seed demonstrations in fifty-five counties gave an average increase of 69.6 bushels over the local bin selected seed.

This work also included

33 spraying demonstrations for the control of orchard diseases.

38 demonstrations for the control of Loose Smut of wheat.

16 demonstrations for the control of Corn Root Rot.

11 demonstrations for the control of truck crop diseases, 287 potato roguing meetings.

Poultry Husbandry.

As a part of the general and specialized poultry work, 458 culling demonstrations were conducted in 16 counties. The purpose of these demonstrations was to instruct those present how to identify the poor producing hen. Each farmer was given an opportunity to handle the birds and pass his judgment regarding them. These demonstrations were attended by 10,957 people, who represented flocks totaling 850,000 birds. Forty thousand birds were examined by the farmers during these demonstrations. Fourteen thousand five hundred birds were discarded as culls. Subsequently the remaining birds laid as many eggs as the entire number had laid prior to culling, thus reducing the feed bill by one-third without decreasing the output. At this rate the saving on the feed bill alone for the flock represented at the demonstrations, would amount to about $310,000.00.

Rural Organization and Cooperation.

Assistance has been given in the organization of a number of market milk plants and also to other community cooperative efforts.
